

Practical support for children’s mental health: Olidata partners with FANEP on the NEULab project

Rome, 26 May 2026 – Olidata S.p.A.’s commitment to social issues, with a particular focus on children and the younger generation, is further strengthened through its support for FANEP – Famiglie Neurologia Pediatrica, an association that has been working for years alongside children, teenagers and families facing challenges related to child neuropsychiatry.

Following the wonderful experience provided by the young people from FANEP during Olidata Day, held on 15 March 2026, when they were invited to present awards – during the pre-match ceremony of the league fixture between Virtus Olidata Bologna and Olimpia Milano – to a number of celebrities representing the company’s values, Olidata has chosen to renew its support with even greater conviction.

In particular, Olidata’s contribution will be used to fund NEULab, a project focusing on integrated medicine and neuroscience promoted by FANEP in collaboration with the Emilia-Romagna Region, the University of Bologna, the IRCCS Sant’Orsola, the IRCCS ISN in Bologna and the Municipality of Bologna, with the aim of providing a concrete response to the growing crisis of neuropsychiatric disorders in children and adolescents.

NEULab is based on a multidisciplinary and innovative approach, capable of integrating advanced psychotechnologies – including virtual reality and biofeedback – with integrated medicine practices, pet therapy, horticulture and multisensory workshops. This openness to innovation is combined with a model deeply rooted in the centrality of the family, understood not merely as a setting for care, but as an active participant in the therapeutic process.

Cristiano Rufini, Chairman of Olidata S.p.A., said: “A technology company cannot view the future solely through the prism of innovation, data and digital infrastructure. The future is, first and foremost, about people, especially children and young people facing vulnerability. Supporting FANEP and the NEULab project means taking on a broader responsibility: choosing to put the strength of our company at the service of research and the community.”

Emilio Franzoni, President of FANEP, commented: “For the third sector, collaboration with socially conscious and responsible businesses is now a key element in building a safety net together that never leaves families to fend for themselves. When a company decides to make a tangible investment in the well-being of the community, it is not merely supporting a project, but helping to build a social model that is more attentive, inclusive and responsive to vulnerability. Olidata’s support is a shining example of how corporate social responsibility (CSR) can have a real impact on the lives of young patients and their families.”

This initiative confirms Olidata’s approach, which focuses not only on innovation as a tool for growth, but also on the community as the place where that progress must generate real, human and shared value.
